MARBLE

MARBLE is a rock resulting from metamorphism of sedimentary carbonate rocks, most commonly limestone or dolomite. Metamorphism causes variable recrystallization of the original carbonate mineral grains. The resulting marble rock is typically composed of an interlocking mosaic of carbonate crystals.

Marble is both durable and attractive which allows it to be used in multiple applications. Floors, accent walls, backsplashes, countertops, stairs, and buildings. Its beauty and uniqueness are a signature of luxury and elegance. Marble's veining and marking found in each tile or slab vary slightly, resulting in a personalized selection every single time.

CARE & MAINTENANCE

Cleaning with gentle soap and a soft cloth on a regular basis is enough to keep marble countertops, walls and floors looking great. Avoid using acidic or abrasive cleaners. Marble will etch when exposed to acidic products like wine, lemon, vinegar, etc. If any spills occur, make sure to spot clean immediately to prevent staining. Sealing frequency will depend on the usage in the home. If countertops are used regularly, probably two to four times per year is recommended. You can test your marble's sealing with the water test. Pour water in several spots on the countertop. You will want to let the water sit on the counter for 10 minutes. If a ring or dark spot forms, the water has penetrated the stone and needs to be resealed.

APPLICATIONS

Marble's personality varies in color, veining and marking. Each of them will transmit a different sensation.
Its unquestionable beauty has been employed for centuries in both design and construction. Marbles are principally used for buildings and monuments. A favorite for luxurious bathrooms and kitchens, and as main surface for flooring and walls. Natural Stone is a product of nature. Any variations in texture, color, and veining must be accepted. These characteristics are not material flaws but signature of authenticity. We recommend requesting current lot photos or samples prior to ordering, as variations in acceptable range may occur without notice. It is the customer's responsibility to inspect the material before installation. Absolutely no claims will be accepted for any reason after installation.
